Using a clinical approach to resolve personnel conflicts, complaints, and grievances.

Revolutionizing Research in Human Resource Development

Cognitive development capitalizes on human resources. Improving functional capacity for information processing enables people to better solve problems.

People often encounter problems in matters of social relations and mental competency. These conflicts may be resolved through alternatives to legal action.

Human labor is the most valuable commodity in society, but it relies upon human resources such as cognitive, behavioral, and emotional competence (intelligence).
